10 TARA NOREEN SAVAGE,

11 Plaintiff,

12 v.

13 CAROLYN W. COLVIN, Acting
14 Commissioner of the Social Security Administration,

15 Defendant.
16

CASE NO. 14-cv-05540 JRC

ORDER ON PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT

17 This Court has jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(c), Fed. R. Civ. P. 73 and 18 Local Magistrate Judge Rule MJR 13 (see also Notice of Initial Assignment to a U.S.
19 Magistrate Judge and Consent Form, Dkt. 3; Consent to Proceed Before a United States
20 Magistrate Judge, Dkt. 4). This matter has been fully briefed (see Dkt. 11, 12, 13).

21 After considering and reviewing the record, the Court concludes that the ALJ
22 erred by failing to discuss significant probative evidence. Had the ALJ credited fully this 23 opinion from an examining doctor, the RFC would have included additional limitations, 24

1 thus the error affected the ultimate disability determination and is not harmless. In 2 addition, the ALJ's rationale for his failure to credit fully some of Dr. Carollo's opinions
3 is not specific and legitimate and supported by substantial evidence in the record as a
4 whole. This error, too, is not harmless.

5 Therefore, this matter is reversed pursuant to sentence four of 42 U.S.C. § 405(g)
6 and remanded to the Acting Commissioner for further consideration.

7 BACKGROUND

8 Plaintiff, TARA NOREEN SAVAGE, was born in 1959 and was 49 years old on 9 the alleged date of disability onset of May 15, 2008 (see AR. 233-35, 236-39). Plaintiff
10 completed her GED (AR. 64). Plaintiff has worked as a truck driver, a warehouse worker
11 and in candy production for a temporary staffing agency (AR. 66-67, 273).

12 According to the ALJ, plaintiff has at least the severe impairments of "chronic 13 obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD); anxiety disorder, NOS; depressive disorder;
14 hepatitis A; [and] hepatitis C (20 CFR 404.1520(c) and 416.920(c))" (AR. 14).

15 In November, 2008 plaintiff was living with her mother (see AR. 362).

16 PROCEDURAL HISTORY

17 Plaintiff applications for disability insurance ("DIB") benefits pursuant to 42
18 U.S.C. § 423 (Title II) and Supplemental Security Income ("SSI") benefits pursuant to 42
19 U.S.C. § 1382(a) (Title XVI) of the Social Security Act were denied initially and 20 following reconsideration (see AR. 129-31, 132-35, 136-37, 138-30). Plaintiff's first 21 hearing resulted in denial of benefits by an Administrative Law Judge (AR. 105-23).
22 Plaintiff requested review and the Appeals Council remanded to an ALJ. Plaintiff's 23
24

1 second hearing, following the Appeals Council remand, (AR. 124-28) was held before
 2 ALJ Gary Elliott (“the ALJ”) on January 31, 2013 (see AR. 29-58). On February 19,
 3 2013, the ALJ issued a written decision in which the ALJ concluded that plaintiff was not
 4 disabled pursuant to the Social Security Act (see AR.9-28).

5 In plaintiff’s Opening Brief, plaintiff raises the following issues: (1) The ALJ
 6 erred in rejecting the medical opinions of Thomas Carollo M.D.; and (2) The ALJ’s
 7 errors were not harmless (see Dkt. 11, p. 1).

8 STANDARD OF REVIEW

9 Pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 405(g), this Court may set aside the Commissioner's
 10 denial of social security benefits if the ALJ's findings are based on legal error or not 11 supported by substantial evidence in the record as a whole. Bayliss v. Barnhart, 427 F.3d
 12 1211, 1214 n.1 (9th Cir. 2005) (citing Tidwell v. Apfel, 161 F.3d 599, 601 (9th Cir.
 13 1999)).

14 DISCUSSION

15 (1) Did the ALJ err in rejecting the medical opinions of examining doctor, Dr. 16 Thomas Carollo M.D.?

17 The ALJ failed to credit fully Dr. Carollo’s opinion that plaintiff’s “articulated 18 anxiety” would interfere with her ability to complete a normal workday or workweek
 19 with a finding that it was inconsistent with the doctor’s own interview and objective 20 findings (see AR. 20). The ALJ also found that if plaintiff was provided the 21 accommodations within the ALJ’s residual functional capacity (“RFC”) that she would 22 not have difficulty performing a normal workday or workweek (see id.). The ALJ thus 23

1 gave only “little weight” to this aspect of Dr. Corollo’s opinion, but gave “substantial
2 weight [] [] to the remainder of Dr. Carollo’s opinion,” finding that the remainder was 3 supported by objective evidence (see id.).

4 Plaintiff complains that the ALJ failed to comment on the opinion from Dr.
5 Carollo that plaintiff was unlikely to be able to “deal with the usual stress encountered in 6 a competitive work environment at this time” (see AR. 365). Plaintiff also contends that 7 the ALJ’s rationale for failing to credit Dr. Carollo’s opinion regarding plaintiff’s ability 8 to complete a normal workday or workweek without interruption is not specific and 9 legitimate and supported by substantial evidence in the record as a whole, as required by 10 Ninth Circuit case law (see Opening Brief, Dkt. 11, pp. 2-3 (citing Lester v. Chater, 83
11 F.3d 821, 830 (9th Cir. 1995))). The Court agrees with plaintiff on both arguments.
12

13 First, as argued by plaintiff, the ALJ failed to note the opinion from Dr. Carollo 14 that plaintiff was unlikely to be able to “deal with the usual stress encountered in a 15 competitive work environment at this time” (see AR. 365). The ALJ gave no reason for 16 rejecting this opinion.

17 The Commissioner “may not reject ‘significant probative evidence’ without 18 explanation.” Flores v. Shalala, 49 F.3d 562, 570-71 (9th Cir. 1995) (quoting Vincent v.
19 Heckler, 739 F.2d 1393, 1395 (9th Cir. 1984) (quoting Cotter v. Harris, 642 F.2d 700, 20 706-07 (3d Cir. 1981))). The “ALJ’s written decision must state reasons for disregarding 21 [such] evidence.” Flores, supra, 49 F.3d at 571. Therefore, the ALJ erred by failing to 22 note Dr. Carollo’s opinion regarding plaintiff’s inability to deal with the usual stress
23 encountered in a competitive work environment. See id.
24

1 The Court finds persuasive plaintiff's argument that it cannot "be reasonably
2 inferred that the ALJ would have simply offered the same rational to reject this opinion
3 as he did with regard to Dr. Carollo's other opinions because those other opinions all 4 relate to the claimant's inability to perform work activities consistently throughout a 5 normal workday or workweek, and this opinion concerns the plaintiff's inability to deal
6 with the usual stress encountered in a competitive work environment" (see Dkt. 11, p. 3).
7 In addition, the ALJ did not provide this rational and according to the Ninth Circuit,
8 "[l]ong-standing principles of administrative law require us to review the ALJ's decision
9 based on the reasoning and actual findings offered by the ALJ - - not post hoc
10 rationalizations that attempt to intuit what the adjudicator may have been thinking." Bray
11 v. Comm'r of SSA, 554 F.3d 1219, 1225-26 (9th Cir. 2009) (citing SEC v. Chenery Corp., 12 332 U.S. 194, 196 (1947) (other citation omitted)); see also Molina v. Astrue, 674 F.3d 13 1104, 1121 (9th Cir. 2012) ("we may not uphold an agency's decision on a ground not 14 actually relied on by the agency") (citing Chenery Corp, supra, 332 U.S. at 196).

16 In addition, the Ninth Circuit has concluded that it is not harmless error for the 17 ALJ to fail to discuss a medical opinion. Hill v. Astrue, 698 F.3d 1153, 1160 (9th Cir.
18 2012) ("the ALJ's disregard for Dr. Johnson's medical opinion was not harmless error
19 and Dr. Johnson's opinion should have been considered") (citing 20 C.F.R. § 404.1527(c) 20 (noting that this Ruling requires the evaluation of "every medical opinion" received)).
21 According to the Ninth Circuit, when the ALJ ignores significant and probative evidence 22 in the record favorable to a claimant's position, such as an opinion from an examining or 23 treating doctor, the ALJ "thereby provide[s] an incomplete residual functional capacity 24

1 [RFC] determination.” See id. at 1161. Furthermore, when the RFC is incomplete, the 2 hypothetical question presented to the vocational expert relied on at steps four and five 3 necessarily also is incomplete, “and therefore the ALJ’s reliance on the vocational 4 expert’s answers [is] improper.” See id. at 1162.

5       Thus, the error is not harmless, as had the ALJ credited fully the opinion regarding 6 dealing with the usual work stress the RFC would have been different, thus affecting the 7 hypothetical presented to the VE at steps four and five, and thus affecting the ultimate 8 disability determination. See id. Therefore, this matter shall be reversed and remanded for 9 further administrative consideration.

10
11       As alluded to previously, the Court also concludes that the ALJ’s rationale for his 12 failure to credit fully Dr. Carollo’s opinion regarding maintaining regular attendance 13 consistently and completing a normal workday or workweek without interruption is not 14 specific and legitimate and supported by substantial evidence in the record as a whole.
15 See Lester, supra, 83 F.3d at 830.

16       The ALJ found that Dr. Carollo’s opinion is “inconsistent with his own interview 17 and objective findings” (see AR. 20). However, the ALJ did not specify any particular 18 inconsistency, and the Court concludes that this finding is not specific and legitimate, and 19 is not based on substantial evidence in the record as a whole. Dr. Carollo included the 20 following notation in his opinion:

21
22       [Plaintiff] articulates multiple neurovegetative symptoms including both 23 insomnia and hypersomnia, decreased interest in activities she once 24 enjoyed, feelings of guilt, again in particular, resulting from her not having children of her own, low energy, feeling chronically fatigued, poor concentration and appetite, and passive suicidality. . . . The

1 claimant also describes anxiety, in particular, when in public. As a result,
2 she has become increasingly avoidant and isolative. She states she does
3 not leave her apartment for days at a time and the “garbage piles up.”

4 (AR. 361). Based on the record, the Court concludes that these interview notations are 5 consistent with Dr. Carollo’s opinion that plaintiff was unlikely to be able to “perform 6 work activities on a consistent basis, maintain regular attendance in the workplace, [and]
7 complete a normal workday or workweek without interruption” (see AR. 361, 365).

8 Regarding the objective findings of Dr. Carollo, he noted that plaintiff was 9 “tremulous appearing” and that her affect was mood congruent with her stated mood as 10 depressed and anxious (see AR. 363). Although Dr. Carollo noted that plaintiff had some 11 positive results on her mental status examination, such as her good concentration,
12 persistence and pace, these findings are distinct from her affective and isolative
13 appearance and behavior and also are consistent with Dr. Carollo’s opinion that plaintiff 14 retained “the ability to perform simple and repetitive tasks and also detailed and complex
15 tasks, should completion of these activities not be impacted by her depressive symptoms
16 or anxiety” (see AR. 363, 365). Based on the record as a whole, the Court concludes that 17 the ALJ’s finding that Dr. Carollo’s objective findings are inconsistent with his opinion 18 regarding her ability to consistently maintain regular attendance in the workplace and to 19 complete a normal workday and workweek without interruption is not specific and 20 legitimate and based on substantial evidence in the record as a whole. See Lester, supra,
21 83 F.3d at 830.
23
24

1 Finally, although the ALJ found that if the accommodation in his RFC were 2 afforded to plaintiff that she would not have difficulty performing a normal workday or 3 workweek, the ALJ failed to explain why his opinion on this was more correct than the 4 opinion of the medical doctor who performed an examination of plaintiff (see AR. 20).
5 This rational does not entail a specific and legitimate reason based on substantial
6 evidence in the record for the ALJ's rejection of Dr. Carollo's opinion.

8 When an ALJ seeks to discredit a medical opinion, he must explain why his own
9 interpretations, rather than those of the doctors, are correct. Reddick v. Chater, 157 F.3d
10 715, 725 (9th Cir. 1998) (citing Embrey v. Bowen, 849 F.2d 418, 421-22 (9th Cir. 1988)); 11 see also Blankenship v. Bowen, 874 F.2d 1116, 1121 (6th Cir. 1989) ("When mental 12 illness is the basis of a disability claim, clinical and laboratory data may consist of the 13 diagnosis and observations of professional trained in the field of psychopathology. The 14 report of a psychiatrist should not be rejected simply because of the relative imprecision 15 of the psychiatric methodology or the absence of substantial documentation") (quoting
16 Poulin v. Bowen, 817 F.2d 865, 873-74 (D.C. Cir. 1987) (quoting Lebus v. Harris, 526 17 F.Supp. 56, 60 (N.D. Cal. 1981))); Schmidt v. Sullivan, 914 F.2d 117, 118 (7th Cir. 1990) 18 ("judges, including administrative law judges of the Social Security Administration, must 19 be careful not to succumb to the temptation to play doctor. The medical expertise of the 20 Social Security Administration is reflected in regulations; it is not the birthright of the 21 lawyers who apply them. Common sense can mislead; lay intuitions about medical 22 phenomena are often wrong") (internal citations omitted)).

1       (2) Were the ALJ's errors harmless?

2       The harmfulness of the error with respect to the failure to note Dr. Carollo's
3 opinion regarding dealing with the usual stress encountered in a competitive work
4 environment was discussed in the context of determining error, see supra, section 1. The 5 Court also concludes that the ALJ's failure to credit fully the opinion of Dr. Carollo that 6 plaintiff was unlikely to be able to "perform work activities on a consistent basis, 7 maintain regular attendance in the workplace, [and] complete a normal workday or 8 workweek without interruption" is not harmless error (see AR. 365).

9       The Ninth Circuit has "recognized that harmless error principles apply in the 10 Social Security Act context." Molina v. Astrue, 674 F.3d 1104, 1115 (9th Cir. 2012)
11 (citing Stout v. Commissioner, Social Security Administration, 454 F.3d 1050, 1054 (9th 12 Cir. 2006) (collecting cases)). The Ninth Circuit noted that "in each case we look at the 13 record as a whole to determine [if] the error alters the outcome of the case." Id. The court
14 also noted that the Ninth Circuit has "adhered to the general principle that an ALJ's error 15 is harmless where it is 'inconsequential to the ultimate nondisability determination.'" Id.
16 (quoting Carmickle v. Comm'r Soc. Sec. Admin., 533 F.3d 1155, 1162 (9th Cir. 2008))
17 (other citations omitted). Courts must review cases "'without regard to errors' that do not 18 affect the parties' 'substantial rights.'" Id. at 1118 (quoting Shinsheki v. Sanders, 556
19 U.S. 396, 407 (2009) (quoting 28 U.S.C. § 2111) (codification of the harmless error 20 rule)).
21
22

23       Had the ALJ credited fully Dr. Carollo's opinion regarding maintaining consistent 24 and regular attendance in the workplace and completing a normal workday or workweek

1 without interruption, the RFC would have including limitations in this area, as would the 2 hypothetical to the vocational expert. As the ALJ's ultimate determination regarding 3 disability was based on the testimony of the vocational expert on the basis of an improper
4 hypothetical, the error affected the ultimate disability determination and is not harmless.
5 See Molina, supra, 674 F.3d at 1115.

6 CONCLUSION

8 Based on the stated reasons and the relevant record, the Court ORDERS that this
9 matter be REVERSED and REMANDED pursuant to sentence four of 42 U.S.C. §
10 405(g) to the Acting Commissioner for further consideration.

11 JUDGMENT should be for plaintiff and the case should be closed.
